

SirionLabs raises $12.25 m led by Sequoia

PPThimmaya

Bengaluru, July 11: SirionLabs, an enterprise software as a service (SaaS) product company in the supplier management space, has raised $12.25 million in Series B funding led by its existing investor Sequoia India. The company founded in 2012 with offices in Gurugram and Michigan also saw the participation from QualGro ASEAN Fund and Canopy Ventures in this new round of funding.

The fresh funding will be used to expand the product capabilities and fuel market growth. In addition, Sanish Mondkar, former executive vice president and chief product officer at SAP, has joined its board of directors. Mondkar will work closely with Sirion's product and engineering teams to further accelerate the pace of innovation and product delivery.

SirionLabs was founded by Ajay Agrawal who earlier founded UnitedLex Corporation, a provider of legal process outsourcing and Claude Marais. The company had earlier raised $4.7 million in Series A funding from Sequoia Capital in 2014.

According to the company, its supplier governance product significantly reduces the cost by automating complex procedures. Governance of complex services suppliers (such as IT outsourcing, BPO etc) continues to be a major challenge for large global organisations with significant outsourcing spend. As per research, the potential global market size for outsourcing governance solutions is estimated to be around $10 billion, with only 0.28% of the market potential currently being tapped.

Google to train 2 mn developers on Android in India

New Delhi, July 11: Tech giant Google aims to train about 2 million developers in India on its Android platform over the next three years to cash in on the high-quality talent pool in the country.

India, which has about one million people working on solutions for the Android mobile platform, is poised to become home to about 4 million developers by 2018, making it the world's largest developer base.

"India is expected to have the largest developer population globally, overtaking the US, by 2018, with four million developers. But today only 25 per cent of developers are building for mobile," Google Vice President Product Management Caesar Sengupta told reporters here.

The aim is to help make India the global leader in mobile app development, he added.

"We are launching a specially-designed instructor-led training programme on Android Fundamentals. This will be made available across public and private universities and training institutes of the National Skill Development Corporation of India (NSDC)," he said.

The in-person training module integrated into the course curriculum will be introduced within this calendar year by these partners.

Google Head of Developer Training Peter Lubbers said the company aims to train about 2 million people in the next three years.

The training is available for both students as well as mid-career developers, he added. Google's global rival, Apple, is also making heavy investments in India to push its iOS mobile platform. In May, it announced setting up a software laboratory in Bengaluru to support startups and developers working on its iOS platform.

It had said Apple's team will work with developers on best practices, help them hone their skills and transform the design, quality and performance of their apps on iOS platform.

Lubbers said Google has partnered universities like Amity University, Lovely Professional University, GD Goenka University and Ray-

at Bahra University among others for its initiative. PTI
